What is Hate Crime?

 Print  Download

Have you been intimidated, harassed, victimised or abused because of who you are or what you believe in?

Hate crime is subjecting people to harassment, victimisation, intimidation or abuse because of their race, faith, religion, disability or because they are lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgendered.

Please note that this kind of crime against lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgendered people is known as homophobic/transphobic crime.

The police use the following definition when recording a hate crime:

"A crime where the perpetrator's prejudice against any identifiable group of people is a factor in determining who is victimised."

This refers to any incident, which appears to be related to an individual because of who they are or what they believe in. Such incidents can be devastating to both the victim and an entire community.

At Derbyshire Constabulary we do not tolerate hate crime. We are committed to giving all victims of crime a professional and sensitive service.

Hate crime can take many forms

- Physical attacks
- Harassment
- Threats
- Disputes with your neighbours
- People swearing at you or making abusive remarks
- People doing things that frighten, intimidate or distress you
- Bullying at school or college
- Arson
- Spitting, insulting gestures.

How to report a hate crime

You can tell us about a hate incident in several ways. You do not have to be the victim to report it. Our officers will do all they can to help you deal with what's happened to you. They can arrange to meet you at a place of your choice where you feel comfortable and safe. They work with you and provide help, including making a statement explaining what has happened.

We Stand Together

Greater Manchester Police have launched a campaign entitled We Stand Together, an initiative promoting community cohesion and unity, celebrating diversity and making a stand against hatred & intolerance.

The initiative has been launched following recent global events which have caused concern within communities across Greater Manchester, concerns which also affect Britain as a whole. Its aim is therefore to encourage people to come together as one and celebrate their differences in order to build a safer and stronger United Kingdom.

As part of the campaign, there is also a Twitter angle, and they're encouraging people to upload a photograph of themselves to Twitter standing with at least one other person using the hashtag #WeStandTogether along with their stated cause.

As a neighbouring force, we're backing their campaign and supporting the message it hopes to deliver.

Derbyshire County Council operates a 'Safe Places' scheme. These are areas in towns or communities where people with learning disabilities can go if they feel scared, threatened or are in trouble when out and about.

The venues will offer that person a temporary place of safety, and either contact the emergency services - such as the police or ambulance - or contact the number on a keep safe card.

See the Derbyshire County Council's website for more information, including where the Safe Places are in Derbyshire.

Can anyone tell I've visited these web pages?

If you are worried about someone knowing which web sites you have visited, you can take several steps to increase your safety when using the internet. Victim Support provides a practical guide to safe website usage.

The only certain way to prevent anyone finding out which web pages you have been viewing is to use a computer they do not have access to; this could be at a local library, a friend's house, or an internet cafe.
